

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

IN VACATION.

Unethical Verse.

Lives of lawyers oft remind us
That we will, if we are wise,
Leave our modesty behind us
And go out and advertise.

Legal Representatives in Utah.—The difficulties of an administration in Utah were recently demonstrated by the following questions propounded by the court to the perplexed legal representative of a deceased polygamist: "How many wives did your father have, Mr. Scott?" "You've got me there, Judge. I have found five, but I'm told he had two or three more." "How many children did he have?" "Well, I've rounded up sixty, your honor, but I believe there are some more scattered around the country."—Central Law Journal.

BOOK REVIEWS.

Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure. William Mack, LL. D., Editor in Chief. Volume XXVII. The American Law Book Company, New York. 1907.

The most important subject treated in this volume is Mechanics' Liens, a subject upon which there are few if any recent text-books. Four hundred and twenty-seven pages are devoted to the subject, and when we take into consideration the amount of matter contained on each page, it is safe to say that the subject is as fully and as exhaustively treated as it ever has been in any text-book. The presence of this most important subject makes Volume 27 of peculiar value. Another subject of great importance treated is that of Mortgages, which covers 952 pages. Mercantile Agencies, Militia, Mills, Mines and Minerals, Miscegenation, Money Lent, Money Paid, Money Received, and Monopolies are the remaining titles of the volume.

We can but express our delight at the fact that this valuable series is approaching completion. It will not be long before its competitors will be unable to make the very effective argument of incompleteness against it.

The Encyclopedia of Evidence. Edited by Edgar W. Camp. Vols. X and XI. L. D. Powell Company, Los Angeles, Cal. 1907.

The publishers of this valuable series, as well as the members of